NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following is a strategic function of the human resources department?

- A. Recruiting new employees
- B. Creating retention plans
- C. Ensuring compliance with federal regulations
- D. Keeping employee data confidential

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation: Creating retention plans is a strategic function of the human resources department. This activity is considered strategic because it is concerned with maintaining an optimal workforce over the long term. Recruiting new employees is more of an operational function, in that it is a practical application of the organization's strategic planning. Insuring compliance with federal regulations and maintaining the confidentiality of employee data are considered administrative functions, because they are part of the normal course of business for a human resources department.
