NEW QUESTION: 4

During a terraform apply, a resource is successfully created but eventually fails during provisioning. What happens to the resource?

- A. The resource will be automatically destroyed.
- B. The resource will be planned for destruction and recreation upon the next terraform apply
- C. Terraform will retry to provision again.
- D. The failure of provisioner will be ignored and it will not cause a failure to terraform apply

Answer: B

Explanation:

If a creation-time provisioner fails, the resource is marked as tainted. A tainted resource will be planned for destruction and recreation upon the next terraform apply. Terraform does this because a failed provisioner can leave a resource in a semi-configured state. Because Terraform cannot reason about what the provisioner does, the only way to ensure proper creation of a resource is to recreate it. This is tainting. You can change this behavior by setting the `on_failure` attribute, which is covered in detail below.
